

EDUCATION

Premium Edit

In many Western countries, teacher education and the teaching job profession of teaching are in a critical state problem in many western countries. The supposedly stigma that low status of the job of teaching is a low-status profession has is affecting on the quality of people applying to applications to teacher education institutes, and therefore, education administrators and parents are constantly blaming teacher educators these institutes, because they for failing to bring out effective produce skilled teachers. In the past recent decades, the argument over educational reforms has led to the a call for a "new" form of teacher education. According to some studies, say that one of the requisites for the improvement the quality of of teacher's education is hiring very highly-qualified candidates for the job of teaching. So Therefore, universities and colleges are becoming more selective among about the candidates they hire and are requiring demanding higher grade point averages for admitting admission into their teacher education programs mes.

Comment [A1]: For clarity, consider being more specific here. For example, can this portion be revised as "many Western countries such as the U.S. and the U.K."?

Comment [A2]: Please provide citations for all such factual information.

Comment [A3]: I suggest that you clarify the period you are referring to. If this article is being read 10 years later, the reader may not be able to instantly gauge the time you are referring to here.

Comment [A4]: For clarity, consider stating the exact nature of these arguments. For example, were they over the need for better education reforms?

Comment [A5]: For your readers' benefit, consider citing these studies here.

Comment [A6]: You may want to clarify at the outset why you are conducting this study. I suggest you clarify what your motivation for conducting this study was and whom the findings will benefit.